Nancy Wynne Tells of the Illness of Mrs. Barker Mellor in Virginia—She Speaks of Penn Charter's Dance at Bellevue-Stratford Tonight

HAVE you heard that Mrs. Barker Mellor is ill down in Lynchburg, Va.? Her son is a student at the Virginia Episcopal School, and was taken with "flu" about a week ago, and was very ill that Mrs. Mellor went down to him. Unfortunately she contracted the grip in a very severe form. Barker Mellor has been back and forth to Lynchburg several times to see her. I understand she is now on the way toward recovery.

NEW YORK, by the way, borrowed a lot of our old ideas for the vaudeville party at the Spence School (that's the Miss Irwin's of New York, you know). Perhaps we put something over on them, and they don't know that they are repeating in their new things which we had last year in the "Talk of the Town," but they did.

TONIGHT the school set will have a fine time. Penn Charter's "Trident" society, will have its eighth annual supper-dance in the Rose Garden of the Bellevue-Stratford. There are to be about 500 guests and dancing and entertaining. The ninth dance, just before supper, is to be "The Mermaids' Promenade" and the twelfth dance, another novelty, will be "The Tune's Frolic." I have not heard who will appear in these novelties, but they will be very beautiful.

I SAW Helen Sewell on Chestnut street the other day. She looked smart in a brown duvetyne suit and a three-quarter length coat and a choker of ivory fox fur. The edge of her dress was trimmed with the same fur, and her small hat of tan-colored duvetyne was the noblest model I have seen for a long time. It features at the side a blue and white feather that I hear, by the way, that Helen and Henry Coxe are to be married in the fall.

DON'T forget the card party this afternoon in the Bellevue-Stratford ballroom for the Southern Industrial Home benefit. Every one is going. Among those who will play will be Misses Helen and Edith, Mrs. William Paul O'Neill, Miss Eloise Dickey, Mrs. Paul Thomson, Mrs. John Gribbel, M. A. Arthur P. Huey, Mrs. William J. Elliott, Mrs. William Carmichael, Henry Guy Jones, dramatic star; Richard Reeve, tennis star; Richard Stafford, football star, and Alden Strong, president senior class.

FATHER had to go away on a business trip, and when saying good-by to small George, aged five, he said to him: "You must take care of mother for me. You will be the only man in the house, you know." George was devoted to himself. Mother was really very touched at the little boy's solicitude and was, imagine her amazement, however, on telling George that daddy would be home next day to have him answer. "Oh, dear! and we've been such a happy couple."

NANCY WYNNE.
